X. Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D to indicate the correct answer to each of the questions.

Sometimes people add to what they say even when they don't talk. Gestures are the "silent language" of every culture. We point a finger or move another part of the body to show what we want to say. It is important to know the body language of every country or we may be misunderstood. In the United States, people greet each other with a handshake in a formal introduction. The handshake must be firm. Friends may place a hand on the other's arm or shoulder. Some people, usually women, greet a friend with a hug.

Probably the most common way of attracting someone's attention is by waving. But how hard can we wave in a situation like this? Suppose you are at the airport, and you see your brother get off the plane and begin talking to you. If you are excited, you might jump up and down and wave as hard as you can to attract his attention. This is the instance where big, obvious non-verbal signal are appropriate.

Learning a culture's body language may be confusing. If you don't know what to do, the safest thing to do is to smile.

IX. Read the following passage and mark the letter A, B, C, or D to indicate the correct answer to each of the questions.

Every child in England is provided with full time education from the age of five to sixteen. There are also two parallel school systems in England. The first is the state school system, which is free for all students and paid for by the state. The second category is the 'independent' or 'public' school system, which is fee-paying. The state school system can be divided into two levels of education: primary education and secondary education.

Many parents send their children to state schools where tuition and the equipment, textbooks and exercise books are given free of charge. About 5% of children go to free-paying school. Under the old system, children attended primary school (from five to eleven) which was followed by a secondary school course (from eleven to fifteen or over). At eleven every child had to sit for the eleven-plus examination. It consisted of tests in English, Arithmetic, and intelligence tests. Those with the highest marks (about 20% of the children) were allowed to go to grammar school. The others were sent to technical schools.
